THE NEW SCRIPTURES. According to Tyndall, Huxley, Spencer, and Darwin.

GENESIS-CHAPTER'I. 1. Primarily the Unknowable moved upon cosmos and evolved protoplasm. And protoplasm was inorganic and undiffer-entiated, containing all things in potential energy; and a spirit of evolution moved upon the fluid mass.

3. And the Unknowable said, let atoms attruct; and their contact begat light, heat, and 4. And the Unconditioned differentiated the atoms, each after its kind; and their combinations tegat rock, air and water. 5. And there went out a spirit of evolution from Unconditioned, and working in protoplasm, by accretion and absorption produced the organic

6. And cell by nutrition evolved primordial germ, and germ developed protogene; and protogene begat eozoon, and eozoon begat monad, and monad begat animacule.

7. And Animalculæ begat ephemera; then began creeping things to multiply on the face of the earth. 8. And earthy atom in vegetable protoplasm begat the molecule, and thence came all grass and every herb in the earth. 9. And animalcule in the water evolved fins, tails, claws and scales; and in the air wings and beaks; and on the land they sprouted such organs as were necessary as played upon by the environment.

11. Now these are the generations of the higher vertebrata, in the cosmic period that the Unknowable evoluted the bipedal mammalia. 12. And every man of the earth, while he was yet a monkey, and the horse while he was a hipparion, and the hipparion before he was an

13. Out of the ascidian came the amphibian and begat pentadactyle; and the pentadactyle by inheritance and selection produced the hylobate, from which are the simiadæ in all their tribes. 14. And out of the simiadæ the lemur prevailed above his fellows and produced the platyrhine monkey.

15. And the platyrhine begat the catarrhine, and the catarrhine monkey begat the anthropoid ape who begat the longimanous orang, and the orang begat the chimpanzee, and the chimpanzee evoluted the what-is-it. 16. And the what-is-it went into the land of Nod and took him a wife of the longimanous

17. And in process of the cosmic period were born unto them all their children the anthropomorphic primordial types. 18. The homunculus, the prognathus, the troglodyte, the autochthon, the terragen—these are the generations of primeval man. 19. And primeval man was naked and not and struggled mightily to harmonize with the 20. And by inheritance and natural selection did he progress from the stabled and homogeneous to the complex and heterogeneous-for the weakest died and the strongest grew and multi-

21. And man grew a thumb for that he had need of it, and developed capacities for prey. 22. For, behold, the swiftest men caught the a tongue which can be thrust out fifteen feet bemost animals, and the swiftest animals got away from the most men; wherefore the slow animals were eaten and the slow men starved to death. 23. And as types were differentiated the weaker types continually disappeared.

24. And the earth was filled with violence; for man strove with man, and tribe with tribe, whereby they killed off the weak and foolish and secured the survival of the fittest.

Moths in the Candle.

The following article is from the pen of Dr. Holland, published in Scribner's Magazine: Every moth learns for itself that the candle burns. Every night, while the candle lasts, the slaughter goes on, and leaves its wingless and dead around it. The light is beautiful, and warm, and attractive; and, discarded by the dead, the foolish creatures rush into the flames, and drop, hopelessly singed, their little lives

It has been supposed that men have reason and a moral sense. It has been supposed that they observe, draw conclusions, and learn by experience. Indeed they have been in the habit of looking down upon the animal world as a group of inferior beings, and as subjects of commiseration on account of their defenselessness, yet there is a large class of men, reproduced by every passing generation, that do exactly what the moths do, and die exactly as the moths die. They learn nothing by observation or experience. They draw no conclusions, save those which are fatal to themselves. Around a certain class of brilliant temptations they gather, night after night, and with singed wings of lifeless bodies, they strew the ground around them. No instructions, no expostulations, no observation of ruin, no sense of duty, no remonstrances of conscience, have any effect upon them. If they were moths in fact they could not be sillier or more obtuse. They are, indeed, so far under the domination of their animal natures that they act like animals, and sacrifice themselves in flames that the world's experience has shown to be fatal. A single passion, which need not be namedfurther than to say that, when hallowed by love and a legitimate gift of life to life, it is as pure as any passion of the soul-is one of the candles around which the human moths lie in myriads of disgusting deaths. If any thing has been proved by the observation and experience of the world it is that licentiousness, and all the illicit gratification of the passions involved in it, are killing sins against a man's own nature-that by it the wings are singed not only, but body and soul are degraded and spoiled. Out of all illicit indulgences come weakness, a perverted moral nature, degradation of character, gross beastliness, benumbed sensibilities, a disgusting life, and a disgraceful

Before its baleful fire the sanctity of womanhood fades away, the romance of life dies, and the beautful world loses all its charm. The lives wrecked upon the rock of sensuality are strewn in every direction. Again and again, with endless repetition, young men yield to the song of the siren that beguiles them to their death. They learn nothing, they see nothing, they know nothing but their wild desire, and on they go to destruction and the devil.

Every young man who reads this article has two lives before him. He may choose either. He may throw himself away on a few illegitimate delights, which covers his brow with shame in the presence of his mother, and become an old man before his time, with all the wine drained out of his life; or he may grow up into a pure, strong manhood, held in healthy relation to all the joys that pertain to that high estate. He may be a beast in his heart, or he may have a unabashed the noblest woman, and an undisputed place in good society. He may have a dirty heads appearing above it.

"By-the-by," said he, "you remember the impurity as both disgusting and poisonous. In seeds you gave me? Well, they are coming up brief, he may be a man, with a man's powers and immunities, or a sham of a man-a white sepulchre-conscious that he carries with him his own dead bones and all uncleanness. It is a matter entirely of choice. He knows what one life is, and where it ends. He knows the essential quality and certain destiny of the other. The man who says he cannot control himself not only lies, but places his Maker in blame. He can control himself, and, if he does not, he is both a fool and a beast. The sense of security and purity and self-respect that come of conscience, entertained for a single day, is worth more than the illicit pleasures of a world for all time. The pure in heart see God in everything, and see Him everywhere, and they are supremely

Wine and strong drink form another candle in which millions of men have singed themselves and destroyed both body and soul. Here the signs of danger are more apparent than in the other forms of sensuality, because there is less secrecy. The candle burns in open space, where all men can see it. Law sits behind and sanctions its burning. Women flaunt their gauzes in it. Clergymen sweep their robes through it. Respectability uses it to light its banquet. In men. Italy could follow with 400,000 men and many regions of this country it is a highly res- Turkey with 200,000; while we have 500,000 men pectable candle. want and misery, of wives in despair, of loves AN AGED WHALE,-Whales are supposed to live bruised and blotted out, of children disgraced, of to a great age; and, apropos, a story is told of a alms-houses filled, of crimes committed through sailor whose boat was wrecked, while he and his its influence, of industry extinguished, and of messmates were tossed in the air by a mad whale's disease engendered, and remember that this has flukes. As he came down, after half an hour had been going on far thousands of years, wherever | clapsed, the whale waited for him with open mouth, wine has been known, what are we to think of and instead of sinking as deep in the sea as he the men who still press into the fire? Have they had been in the air, he slid smoothly into the any more sense than the moths? It is almost whale's interior. As soon as he recovered his mough to shake a man's faith in immortality to breath he drew out his tobacco-box and helped learn that he belongs to a race that manifests so himself to a fiberal " quid," which he rolled over little sense, and such hopeless recklessness.

An Interesting Document. In an old-fashioned wooden frame, bearing the nscription, "S. Brand, Carver and Gilder, No. 27 High Street, Edinburgh," but exhibiting no other marks by which its age could be decided, was recently found the following document. Apart from any historical value which may be claimed for it, the description is perfect in its sim-plicity, and presents the picture, which is painted by our imaginations, of what might have been the aspect of Jesus of Nazareth to the eyes of the generation that beheld him walking in their midst. The Eristle is said to have been taken by Napoleon I. from the public records of the city of Letter to Publics Lentulus to the Senate of Rome Concerning Jesus Christ:

It being the usual custom of Roman Governors to advise the Senate and People of such material things as happened in their Provinces; in the days of the Emperor Tiberius Cæsar, Publius Lentulus, President of Judea, wrote the following Epistle to the Senate, concerning our Saviour: "THERE is in these days, a Man of great virtue, 10. An Engine of Destruction.

A queer, rakish, mud-turtle-like craft steamed out of the navy-yard, Brooklyn, on Wednesday, and steamed down the bay. It was the newly-finished torpedo boat Alarm, bound down the bay ashamed, but lived in quadrumanous innocence, on a trial trip to test her engines, and especially the new patent steering propeller with which she is fitted. She had on board Admiral Porter, who designed her, Admiral Boggs, Captain Schufeldt, Commodore Rhind, Captain Jones, of the British navy, and an officer of the German navy.

The steamer's torpedo apparatus is a long snout prejecting twenty feet forward of her bow, and is ten feet below the surface of the water. This snout is really a cylindrical tube, in which plays youd the orifice of the tube. The torpedo is attached to this tongue. At each discharge the tongue is returned to compartments in the largest part of the snout, there to be recharged.

The Fowler patent steering propeller is a horisontal wheel, with feathering wheels so arranged that the vessel can be steered by changing the angle of the blade while she is at the same time propelled. The engines were not operated at their greatest speed, as the main object was to test the steering apparatus. Several experiments were made with this in the lower harbor. It worked with utmost ease. The vessel was made to turn completely around in a diameter of 200 feet, while a speed of eight miles an hour was obtained from a little over half her engine power. Changing from full speed ahead to full speed astern occupied thirty seconds. The steering gear is operated by small engines and seems to be

An erring husband who had exhausted all explanations for late hours, and had no apology ready, recently slipped into the house about I o'clock, very softly, denuded himself gently and began rocking the cradle by the bedside as it he had been awakened out of a sound sleep by infantile cries. He had rocked away for five minutes, when Mary Jane, who had silently observed the whole maneuver said, "Come to bed, you fool, you ! the baby

Mississippi local editor: "Once more the Anglo Saxon walks erect, his eye proudly beaming with the light of triumph and his breast heaving with the undying spirit of freedom. Once more the children of the Conqueror and the descendants of Altred and Edward glory in their ancestry and fling the standards of white supremacy to the fragrant breezes of the Southland, and the shouts of the victorious and unconquerable Caucasian ascends in a grand diapason to the eternal throne of Liberty."

Did you ever see a woman throw a stone? This perspicacious member of the human family is up in the garret sorting over paper rags. She receives by intuition information that a hen has somehow got into her verbena bed. With characteristic agility she descends to the garden, and gracefully picks up a stone, dropping off her glasses and los-ing a spool of thread, a pair of scissors and a tapeline out of her pocket in the operation. She peeks around the corner of the house, and spies the animal. Cautiously she advances until near enough, then she elevates herself, throws back her neck, poises most gracefully her left hand, and lets fly, and—strikes her next door neighbor, who happens to be in the garden weeding, plumb on the nose. And the hen, oh, where is she? Readers, this is no fancy picture. You never knew a woman to hit any thing with a stone she ever aimed at, even were it the broadside of a barn; but give them a small child across their knee, and (we know by experience) they never miss the mark. And vet we love them.

A HERRING BED .- "Some seed was given to me the other day," said a gentleman to his friend, "and as I know you take an interest in such things, you can have it if you like; it is herring seed, and I am told with proper care it will grow if placed in the garden.

"Thank you," said the latter; "I'll try it, pocketing a part of the hard roe of a herring. About a month after, he invited his generous wife whom he worships, children whom he de- friend to dinner, and as he came early, he asked lights in, a self-respect which enables him to meet | him into the garden, having previously placed some fresh herring in the ground, with their war is the best means of insuring the continuance of peace, the tranquility of Europe, remarks the Pall Mall Gazette, must have been effectually secured this year, in which large additions have been made to the forces of every European power. The proposed legislation in reference to the German Landsturm will increase the military strength of Germany to an extent hardly yet realized, though the Spencer Gazette estimates the increased force arising from the first call of the Landsturm at 300,000 men. The French army will, beginning from this year, be increased within twelve years to 1,800,000 men, a force supplemented by a Landsturm organization less extensive than that of Germany. Russia will in the same period muster a standing army of 750,000 men, and a reserve of 1,740,000. Austria has made so much progress in the development of her military resources that she could take the field from with 500,000 to 600,000 persons in this country die of intemperance; and when we think of the blasted lives that live in European war.

and over in his mouth as he laughed at his abventure. Presently be arose from the soft but moist couch on which he had fallen, and surveyed the apartment, which contained many wonders, you may be sure. Some writing on one of the walls attracted his attention, and on examination it proved to be the words, " Jonah, B. C. 862." This amused him so much that the "quid" fell out of his mouth, and the whale began to writhe and show a violent dislike to nicotine. A happy idea occured to him, and he cut his plug of tobacco into small pieces, which he distributed over the floor. The whale then heaved more violently than before, and while Jack was holding his sides at the joke, he was thrown into the water, and almost on board of the Ship's boats. Some of his comrades doubted his wondrous story, but for the benefit of unbelievers he had brought back with him a pocket-knife with a buck-horn handle, on which were carved Jonah's intitials and an Amer-

The Boston and Philadelphia papers have been indulging in a little friendly controversy regarding the merits of Ben Franklin as a financier. It seems that Franklin left £1,000 to the city named JESUS CHRIST, who is yet living amongst of Boston and the same sum to the city of Philadelphia, to be loaned to married mechanics in small sums, to assist them in starting business, and the interest to be compounded from year to year for a hundred years. According to his calculation each legacy would amount to £131,000 in the midst of his head is seam, or partition of creased, at the end of eighty-six years, to $46.135,
